

About the Editors

---

For biographical information about John Landis, see page 263.

Skip Lowney, graduated with an M.C.P., 1998, from the University of California, Berkeley, with a concentration in Urban Design. He focused on the city of non-growth, and deciphering the institutions needed to sustain that urban form. Skip participated in a design charette to prepare a re-use plan for the East Garrison area of Ft. Ord, California. He is a registered architect, having received his Bachelor of Architecture and a B.A. in Urban Studies from the University of Maryland, College Park in 1982.

His most recent work experience was as consultant to the United States Postal Service, Headquarters, from 1991-95. He provided design, development, and implementation management for the national post office lobby design standardization program; and co-authored several publications on standards. Prior to that, Skip worked for a year as Cad Project Manager at D.B.I. Architects in Washington, DC; as an Associate Planner with John Pickard Associates in Washington, DC, where he assisted in planning and design of new mixed-use developments in the Washington area; and as an Architect at Greenwell Goetz Architects for three and one-half years where he was responsible for all phases of projects. One of his projects for a contract furniture and fabrics showroom was published in Interiors magazine in 1988.